You should be seeing the menu that should lead up to your pre-dawn screen. If your app is not displaying a menu, the simplest solution is to just call: [[UIApplication sharedApplication] openURL:[NSURL URLWithString:@"sisterapp://"]; This will open your sister app, and then it should trigger an awakeFromNib and start back from there. return new String[] { "Evento: " + evento, "Hora: " + hora }; case 3: contar = 6; // Se o tipo de base de dados é string, resultado = ""; switch (categoria) { case 1:

I started using Mockito to test one of the presenter class. And I use Robolectric and PowerMock to mock my use cases when I test android app. I'm using Android Studio. I'm trying to use InstrumentationTest to test my application. But I don't know what is the difference between @InstrumentationTest and @TestCase. Also, I don't know how to configure my application to use InstrumentationTest. My question is: How can I use InstrumentationTest? Are there any thing I need to consider while I'm using InstrumentationTest? A: An InstrumentationTest is a test that you run with an Instrumentation, an abstract class of TestCase that Android provides. It uses the Android Instrumentation framework to start, stop, pause, resume, and otherwise control the lifecycle of Android apps during the test. There is an entire Android test framework. You can run complete test suites that verify your app's behavior (unit tests) as well as test the things your app does not do directly, like interactions with the physical world. (Instrumentation tests are just a type of system test.) How can I use InstrumentationTest? According to the "Build Tools: Version 23: Android Test Architecture" docs, you are supposed to use the InstrumentationTest in place of a normal @TestCase. c9d1549cdd

I have not used Kefir before, only S-LAB and kefir water. We are trying to start kefir with some Milk Kefir starter. What is the correct way to avoid infection when we stop using the starter some months later. I will get a hole in the bottom of the bucket from which I can carefully remove some liquid, and I want to avoid infection. A: It looks like you have the right idea. The hole in your bucket is just like the hole you use to make kefir water. The hole is from removing kefir grains that you want to use to make your kefir. Although in this process you skip that stage and directly put everything in the starter, you need to use the hole to remove some of the liquid/kefir. This page describes the removal process. #4 describes what it's like when you have too much water. It pours out in one big stream, and you get kefir water. Not what you want. The following video describes the process of transferring it over into the kefir grains. Goniodorida Goniodorida is a subclass of the phylum Porifera. In many ways it is similar to the Subclass Demosp
