Excessive use of mysql performance_schema I have a MariaDB 10.1.24 running on Ubuntu 16.04 LTS which I am using extensively as my primary database. The site is currently receiving more than 1 million page requests per hour, and that seems to stress my database. Per hour, approximately 10 queries are run from any one IP, and all queries are from different queries - the maximum is approximately 900 queries per hour. According to my findings from using the `mysql_slow_queries` table in the `mysql_performance_schema`, these are the most frequent queries per hour: `SELECT... FROM performance_schema.threads WHERE PROCESSLIST_ID = '9'` `SELECT... FROM performance_schema.threads WHERE PROCESSLIST_ID > '236638'` `SELECT... FROM performance_schema.users` `SELECT... FROM performance_schema.session_variables` `SELECT... FROM performance_schema.hosts` These types of queries are running in what appears to be 15 different threads. The query itself (as well as the actual execution) is only 'small'. Based on this, I was wondering if I should take any steps to prevent these frequent queries from running in parallel, as they eat up CPU and memory for no good reason. A: The MariaDB developers usually try to keep a steady release cycle of MariaDB, but once every six months this is no longer the case, and new fixes and new features are introduced. This is in line with the MySQL development cycle, and also means that you need to be ready for MariaDB 10.2, or at least know how to deal with the new features, which are being polished now. That's not to say MariaDB 10.2 is final, but it's the first beta release and we're trying to stabilize the development. So if you don't use submit in CakePHP My form submission in cakePHP is as follows: echo $this->Form->create('User', array('action' =>'register')); echo $this->Form->input('username'); echo

$this->Form->input('email'); echo
$this->Form->input('password'); echo $this->Form->input('remember', array('type' => 'checkbox', 'value' => '1')); echo
$this->Form->submit('Register'); echo
$this->Form->end();

I want to suppress the cancel button (the one that is a checkbox with a 'x' icon inside a circle) on the form, is it possible to do this? I know it's possible, since it's present on forms in many other web-sites that I use daily. In other words, the default behaviour on the 'Back' button in the form is that it automatically goes back to the previous page, but I don't want the 'Back' button on my form to do the same thing, do I? A: Well, it should be quite easy as you are using the FormHelper, so just add the following code to your form :

echo
$this->Form->input('remember
