Captain's Journal -- Chapter 1 Author's Note: Don't worry. I'm still alive. Healing is far more tiring than I expected. Capt. is not, because he's already giving me a convincing story and I believe his story. Like the man said "I believe there is a lot of pain in the truth." Oh, and I know my grammar isn't perfect but I still enjoyed writing this. ====== I was born in a small town on an island far away from the mainland. You can call it a beach-side paradise if you want. It's mostly a quiet town though. Some go back and forth to the mainland for vacations and winter vists. We're safe and quite isolated. The town's name is Tropodiluvion. I let him borrow this book for free, thinking that he's no older than me, actually. I just can't hide how afraid I was when I found him tied up in the forest with his empty grocery bag in his hand. And now I carry those bodies for no reason. If you're wondering about how I came to be holding their bodies, you're in the right place. Looking for a way to the mainland, I stumbled on something. "Oh my gosh!" a voice shouted. "Look!�

Rallye racetracks near and far. After a few years spent living on the road, the young couple finally decided to return to their native land, and settle near the motorway called "Westport race circuit". It was not an easy decision, because the "Westport race circuit" is not well-equipped, has an unorganized structure, and requires frequent maintenance. The renovated house in the "heart of the motorway", meant to put this obstacle in the past. Even so, it takes time to get out of the place and start the business.
