We have developed a real-time bioluminescence imaging system using an eight-well slide cover glass. In this system, the images are divided into 4 or 8 sectors, and the level of detection is increased by using a 8- or 16-well slide cover glass. With an 8- or 16-well cover glass, detection limits for the images become 0.8 or 0.1 pM/cm(2) for firefly luciferase and 1.2 or 0.2 nM/cm(2) for renilla luciferase, respectively. Furthermore, the instrument is useful for imaging systems in which the target cells are dense and must be imaged over a large area of a well at any given time. This system is suitable for studies on the cell-to-cell heterogeneity within a population of mammalian cells. 0cc13bf012
