I would like to create a bot with micropayments on my site. It has to be possible to trigger and retrieve the transactions from a bitcoin core server. I already created a bot using the python-bitcoinrpc library but that bot does not support transactions from a server. Is there any other working library for that? A: Yes, you can use software that is only available as downloadable.tgz archive, so it is not accessible through an API, so only get the tgz from bitcoin core and unpack it. Alternatively you could use a public bitcoin node, if you run it yourself. A role for oxidative stress in the pathogenesis of focal segmental glomerulosclerosis. In focal segmental glomerulosclerosis (FSGS) clinical, morphologic and experimental data point to an oxidative stress in the pathogenesis of this glomerulopathy. Albuminuria, hematuria and hypoproteinuria are present in approximately one half of patients with FSGS. This sequence of renal functional abnormalities precedes a progressive glomerulosclerosis. The activity of nicotinamide adenine dinucleotide (phosphate) (NADP)-dependent enzymes, such as dehydrogenases and malic enzyme, is decreased in the glomeruli and tubular epithelia of patients with FSGS. NADP-dependent malic enzyme activity is especially decreased in the presence of hematuria. The decrease in NADP-dependent dehydrogenases and malic enzyme activity have been observed in all types of FSGS. Two NADP-dependent enzymes are also decreased in experimental FSGS: the glyceraldehyde phosphate dehydrogenase and glycerol phosphate dehydrogenase. These studies suggest that the low NADP-dependent enzyme activities in FSGS may reflect the oxidative stress present in the pathogenesis
