Ts Dreambox Player 7.0-setup Version 11

i have plex media server on my mce pc as well as the plex app and they work great together. mediaserver will play back any supported file in supported file formats in the mediaserver library - not the media on your server but any media you have on your network that plex media server can locate. i just think it was not a priority to support xbmc over plexi installed the video files on the plex & plex media server for playback but they never played on the tv, seems a lot more simple and easier to get working with plex. i still have the xbmc video player installed on my tv, maybe i will use that one later on to play the plex videos but i was disappointed with the support for plex and also the updating of the xbmc app. digital has now taken the lead, there are cheap chinese products that you can get in most countries, and the combination of the price tag plus the stock content is getting smaller and smaller. thats fine with me, its also fine with the poor guy who has to buy whatever they offer, based on whether there is a feature in there that makes it worth the money to him. so yes, i do get it. one final comment. although its good to see the high calibre reviews i always look for, i must say i found most of them repetitively the same, and since most of these reviews also come from china, i dont feel surprised to see so many repetitive editorials over there that were also published by people like anand, locks, ifixit and others. hello gertjan, i am starting with the top of your list of reviews of the dreambox prime series. i am starting with dreambox prime h5 because that one was a relatively cheap way to try out a popcorn hour player and as it turned out it was a very nice device. i am also an old dreambox user, and have been using popcorn hour player p3 for several years. 5ec8ef588b
