Keywords. FL-MC (FLUORESCENT MOBILE CATHETER) : "FL-MC (FLUORESCENT MOBILE CATHETER) is a single-use light-weight medical device which can be used for. The FL-MC catheter is a breakthrough product for patients and physicians that will revolutionize the way endovascular. Should FL-MC devices not be used? Not with FL-MC" (page 3). "The FL-MC represents a new technological revolution for the treatment of the patient suffering from peripheral arterial disease, including both patients with Trans-Atlantic Inter-Society Consensus (TASC) II A and B lesions and patients with TASC C lesions. Every 30 minutes, a new paper is published about some variation of the FL-MC catheter. The most important original technologies to have been developed for this device are the ability to deliver up to seven medical devices (including vascular catheters, stents, and balloons) to a single catheter, and the ability to navigate the catheter through any tortuous vasculature while maintaining a constant blood flow, both of which allowed the development of the FL-MC. A. Introduction: The FL-MC is the first medical device with the capabilities to deliver multiple therapeutic devices with a single catheter. It is a single-use, radio-opaque, and fluoroscopy-free catheter which provides direct access to treat iliac arteries, popliteal arteries, and infrapopliteal arteries in the leg. The FL-MC catheter represents a breakthrough in treating patients with challenging peripheral artery disease, improving outcomes and quality of life for patients. Just like the currently used endovascular devices, the FL-MC catheter can be used in different clinical scenarios (Figure 1) but its benefits are more pronounced in patients with disease that is more complex to treat with other medical devices, such as patients with Trans-Atlantic Inter-Society Consensus (TASC) C lesions. The ability to deliver multiple therapeutic devices with a single catheter in the peripheral circulation is a critical component of the clinical efficacy of the FL-MC. As illustrated in Figure 2, the four different therapeutic devices that can be combined with the FL-MC are: (1) a 0.035" guidewire for placement, (2) a stent, (3) a balloon, and (4) a drug delivery balloon. Even though each of the four components of the FL-MC catheter has its own separate indications, with the exception of the drug-eluting balloons, each of the components is indicated for use with different peripheral arterial disease indications, including infrapopliteal lesions. Given that the FL-MC is a single catheter device, its placement and
